

Salem Witches Female Version

Martha Corey

Opinionated and outspoken, Martha Corey's main scandal was her mothering an illegitimate, mixed-race son. She is highly intelligent and likes to research things before coming to a definite conclusion. She is an avid reader, which was one of the reasons she was accused of witchcraft.

Tituba

Originally from Barbados, Tituba is a slave at the Putnam house. She is outgoing when with the other slaves, but introverted with the villagers. Before being brought to Salem she married a man named John, who also works as a slave at the Putnam residence. It was Tituba's stories of voodoo that inspired the girls to begin the witchcraft accusations.

Deliverance Hobbs

Deliverance, mother of witch accuser Abigail Hobbs, is very quiet and generally keeps to herself. She's weak and timid, and seems to be crumbling under the pressure of prison life.

Bridget Bishop

Bridget Bishop is the biggest scandal in Salem Village since long before the witch hunt began. As the owner of a house of ill-repute, she is the object of the villager's gossip and receives scowls from other women for entertaining their husbands late into the night. She has also been accused of not paying her bills and playing the forbidden game, "shovel board", which has made her a shoe-in for a witchcraft accusation!

Bethya Carter

Bethya is more than proper, never steps out of line and is the epitome of the "proper" woman. Most of the village was surprised when she was accused of witchcraft and imprisoned. Bethya speaks with a very faint accent because she is originally from a different town.

Alice Parker

Alice Parker used to be a beggar, but has pulled herself up by her bootstraps and is now back on her feet. She first came to Salem Village when she was young. She lived with the Putnams for a time and then moved away. When she returned, she lived on the streets before coming into some money. Alice has long, intensely white-blond hair.

Rebecca Nurse

Rebecca Nurse's Piety is unchallenged in the community. Needless to say, many were shocked when they found out she had been arrested; most sprung to her defense, describing her as "saint-like".

Ruth Wilford

Ruth is a total introvert, and lives in a house in the woods. She hardly comes to town, except to purchase the occasional loaf of bread. Usually, Ruth survives off the land, and is rumoured to be a potion-maker.